Jim Ritzman Retires After Years of STIC Support & Dedication

As Pennsylvania's State Transportation Innovation Council (STIC) continues to win national accolades and helps foster transformation across the state, one of its leading advocates and overseers is about to take leave. PennDOT Deputy Secretary for Planning Jim Ritzman retires in June, and under his influence, STIC kept its momentum.

"Jim helped us keep it current and prevented it from losing momentum," said PennDOT Secretary Leslie S. Richards. "He always recognized the value of all perspectives working on innovation."

The STIC Thanks Leo Bagley for Contributions

As he wraps up a 45-year planning career, Executive Deputy Secretary Leo Bagley notes with enthusiasm the progress PennDOT is making with its State Transportation Innovation Council (STIC).

"The results coming out of the STIC are in line with Secretary Leslie Richards' focus on implementing robust innovations to move the transportation agenda forward," Bagley said.

"Our STIC is winning national acclaim for its focus on deploying well-researched and proven innovations."
